Description: Many budding young artists are captivated by the exciting, colorful stories they see depicted in comic books, cartoons, manga and anime. The goal of this class, open to middle school and high school students, is to harness that excitement, and provide students with a solid foundation of fundamental art and storytelling skills- skills that will benefit the student no matter what direction their art eventually takes. Topics of discussion will include the basics of anatomy, perspective, page layout, character design, and story pacing, as well as an exploration of various media and techniques. Students will be expected to maintain a sketchbook, and will be responsible for some homework assignments.
